Profile and Relevant Experience

Megan joined Landgage in May 2026 to start her career in consultancy after several years of experience in commercial archaeology. She has worked on a variety of rural and urban projects, including large infrastructure jobs on SPA, Hinkley Point C and Trinity Burial Ground. Megan has supervised teams of varying sizes, ensuring projects are completed to an agreed deadline and budget.

At university, Megan was an active member of UoY Arch Soc. and volunteered on various projects, gaining field experience overseas as well as archival work experience at the Borthwick Institute for Archives.

During the coronavirus pandemic, Megan took a brief hiatus from archaeology and gained valuable experience in the pensions industry. This strengthened her skills in finance and client communication, which she brings to her role as an Archaeology Consultant.

She has:

- Experience supervising archaeological projects on time and to budget
- Produced numerous written schemes of investigations, interim reports and post-excavation reports

Project Examples:

Stanford Hall Rehabilitation Estate, Nottinghamshire: This site comprised the monitoring of soil redistribution, in an area to the west of Stanford Hall, which was extracted during the construction of the Defence and National Rehabilitation Centre. Megan supervised the archaeological monitoring on the site of the 18th century (grade II*) house, as well as produced the final report. The report included the historical and archaeological background, the analysis of historic mapping, as well as the results of the archaeological monitoring to fulfil conditions 7 and 8 of the planning permission for the works. Client: BS Stanford Ltd.

Land at Radipole Lane, Weymouth, Dorset: This site comprised works for a residential housing development with associated infrastructure and access. Megan produced an Archaeology and Heritage Statement. This site was located near to Radipole Conservation Area but due to careful design and planning, the Proposed Development was designed as such that there would be no harm to the significance of the built heritage assets within the vicinity of the study site. Client: CG Fry & Sons Ltd.

Former Lockleaze Day Centre, Bristol: This site comprised works of a residential building with commercial units underneath, on a previously developed plot of land. Megan produced the heritage statement which incorporated the assessment of a scheduled monument, conservation area and a registered park and gardens within the vicinity of the study site. After preparing the report, it was clear that there were minimal heritage or archaeological constraints that require further mitigation. Client: Anchor Homes.
